Fannie Battle
Day Home for Children

INTRODUCTION

For 132 years the Fannie Battle Day Home for Children has long withstood the test of time in the Greater Nashville Community. Being a model of success and a champion of its mission, this organization has evolved with the landscape of the city as well as the developing world of childcare. Like children, organizations like Fannie Battle need to be nurtured and supported to sustain continued growth. Our attention will always remain on providing children and families with a loving and supportive environment just as it has been for the last 132 years.

MISSION

Our mission is to provide accessible and affordable high-quality childcare while empowering families to reach their fullest potential.

HOW YOUR SUPPORT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

For 132 years, Fannie Battle Day Home has provided affordable, high-quality childcare to working families. Globally, the demand for care continues to grow exponentially. With high-quality care, children especially those living in low-income communities, will receive essential building blocks needed to be strong and successful learners. Parents and caregivers can work or further their educations to provide a positive and an empowering environment for their family to flourish.

STORY OF US

Our story began in 1891 when Miss Fannie Battle saw a need in the community. She had joined a crowd gathered on the side of the street in north Nashville. Lying on the ground was a severely undernourished boy, who had been hit by a wagon, crying in pain. Miss Battle picked up the four-year-old, took him to the hospital, and went to find his parents. She learned that the boy's father had deserted his six other siblings and his mother, who was forced to work in the mill, leaving the children on their own each day.

Fannie Battle rented a room in a house near the cotton mill – from her own limited means – and thus began Nashville's first, and Tennessee's second, day home. Fannie Battle Day Home continues to provide affordable, high-quality childcare to working Nashville families. Our sliding scale is based on income and family size, and we work with families to secure childcare vouchers from the state for those needing extra assistance. Currently, we provide care and education to over 100 children ages six weeks to 12 years old.

FINANCIALS

With accessible and dependable care, families are better equipped to meet work expectations with the knowledge their children are safe and well cared for. Additionally, high-quality, affordable childcare allows for more skilled workers in the job market and helps to stabilize the economy. Below is a summary of the unaudited financials of our organization as of fiscal year end 6.30.2023. These numbers highlight the key components of our income and expenses that tell our story.

* Includes Federal Childcare Stabilization Grant, NOT annually renewable.
